EUROPEAN CONGRESS OF EPIDEMIOLOGY
CRISÉS, EPIDEMIOLOGICAL TRANSITIONS AND THE ROLE OF EPIDEMIOLOGISTS

PROGRAM
JULY 4-6, 2018
CITÉ INTERNATIONALE
LYON FRANCE

www.euroepi2018.com
During the last two decades, health crises have often been related to epidemics of infectious diseases. However, a crisis can be economical, political, humanitarian, ecological, or associated with a major acute or chronic health event. Whatever the circumstances of crises and their consequences in the short, medium and long term, health is rarely spared, especially in the most vulnerable populations.

Crises invariably result from multiple factors, the respective contributions of which are challenging to identify and quantify. Health-related outcomes therefore need to be studied using appropriate methods, and epidemiologists play a key role in providing valid information to public authorities. Providing a relevant epidemiological analysis of crises is indeed essential for establishing appropriate and proportionate control measures, but also for anticipating the future, in terms of both the direct consequences of the crisis and our ability to use the experience acquired to improve public health policies.

Crises can have a major impact on populations, and be incompletely resolved before a secondary related crisis occurs in the same population. Health matters, including control measures and access to care, can then be key issues.

We hope that this congress will provide opportunities to explore these issues in depth. Other topics will be also presented, including the epidemiology of chronic diseases, infectious diseases, methodological issues, quantitative and qualitative analysis, vaccine impact, access to care, etc. Efforts will be made to share expertise and education with junior epidemiologists.

Ultimately, these results need to be beneficial for populations, whatever their daily life situation.

We hope you find the congress interesting, and that you can find some time to visit the lovely Lyon area.
The International Epidemiological Association (IEA) has more than 1100 members worldwide. IEA seeks to promote the highest quality of epidemiological practice to solve health problems throughout the world. This is done through scientific meetings, seminars and training courses; the publication of journals, books and other materials; through networking and the exchange of ideas among members; and through other activities consistent with these aims and aligned with our principles of universality, decentralization and volunteerism.

The association of French-speaking epidemiologists was created in 1976. Its headquarters are in Bordeaux (France). Its current membership is 738 members who come mainly from French-speaking countries. ADELF is open to all those who take an interest in epidemiology in the field of medical research and public health.

ADELF aims at making contacts easier between French-speaking epidemiologists and with other epidemiologists, as well as developing and spreading epidemiological methods. The association also strives to promote all studies and research in epidemiology.

ADELF’s website www.adelf.isped.u-bordeaux2.fr

EPITER association, founded in 1985 as a continuation of the first International applied epidemiology course (IDEA), brings together field epidemiologists from different occupational background, practising in France and abroad. Promotion and development of training and research in field epidemiology, pooling of professional experiences and information, scientific exchanges with French and foreign health actors, public health and epidemiologists are at the heart of Epiter motivations and activities. The association is made up of IDEA course “former students” and trainers as well as co-opted members, gathering to date more than 710 members. The association is also open to new training courses participants (Epiet course, Dakar applied epidemiology course) sharing a common culture of field epidemiology.

TARGET GROUP:
The workshop is meant for creating a platform of exchange between everybody involved or interested in teaching Epidemiology. All participants will be invited to present examples of “best practice” in the field.

ABSTRACT:
The German National Catalogue of Core Competencies in Epidemiology is the preliminary result of a multiple-stage development process involving scientists and practitioners teaching epidemiology in German bachelor and master courses. The Catalogue was discussed and adopted during the First National Teaching Conference that was held in Hannover in 2017. We would now like to present the catalogue and discuss it on a European level with all interested European colleagues. Also, we intend to invite a Keynote Speaker giving impulses about e.g. the development of curricula and competence building. The workshop should be the stage for the formation of an Epidemiological Teaching Alliance (ETA).

Leptospirosis is among the leading zoonotic causes of morbidity worldwide, is now re-emerging in Europe?

Each year, there are 1 million clinical cases and 60,000 deaths due to leptospirosis worldwide.

In Europe, this zoonosis is considered as an emerging disease due to global climate changes (global warming and more frequent extreme climatic events resulting in flooding) and rapid urbanization which favour rodents proliferation and therefore rat-borne transmission, the main carriers of leptospirosis.
